Passage 1 · The Night the Light Went Out · Pasaje 1 · Cuento

1 On the last Friday of October, Nadia arrived at her grandmother Rosa's cottage at Pelican Cove, a small bay on the St. Johns River. Rosa had kept the cove's small lighthouse for twenty years, and Nadia loved climbing its iron stairs. From the top, they could see Milo the manatee drifting in the calm water below and Gilda the heron hunting along the muddy shore.

2 That evening, dark clouds piled up beyond the trees. The wind beat against the windows like a drum, faster and faster. High in the lighthouse, the great lamp flickered once, then dimmed until only a weak yellow glow remained. “That lamp is tired tonight,” Rosa said, frowning at the glass.
